

Looking at the News with Col. Hugh Clark

A retail merchant writes to a newspaper saying that medical men who do a great deal of work for which they never expect to be paid are no different from himself and others in the retail trade who necessarily incur bad debts. There is a difference however. A doctor cannot refuse to answer the call of distress. A retail merchant need not sell goods on credit.

We can tell pretty accurately by the amount of the succession duties what a man's estate is worth, says a financial writer. Sure. It's dead giveaway.

The Agassiz, B.C. hen that laid 357 eggs in 365 days should get the blue eagle. She looked after production all right but it must grieve her to think that she must leave to bungling, blundering man the job of looking after the transportation and distribution end of the business.

Last year another hen, in Florida, made a similar record and we reproduce a verse written on that occasion.

"Fool!" the rooster said. "Reduction Practice I implore you. Please! Can't you see what mass production did to other industries?"

Tammany is defeated in the New York city elections. But the setback is not serious. It takes New York a long time to tire of graft and waste in its municipal administration. Once in every generation it becomes shocked and turns on Tammany, but the shock soon passes. The city tires quickly of being good and returns to the wigwag as a wandering prodigal does to his ancestral roof-tree.

"Jimmy" Walker was the most popular Mayor the city ever had. He was a song-writer, a wise-cracker, a play-boy, a gigolo. The city's debt doubled while he was Mayor, and graft was brought home to himself and his brother and other relatives and close friends, including one Sherwood who paid a fine of $50,000 rather than appear in the Seabury investigation.

We sometimes think democracy would vindicate itself if there were just enough people who would vote against a candidate because he was popular in favor of one who was strong and honest but decidedly unpopular.

One party in B.C. calling itself non-partisan is opposed to further borrowing by the province but in favor of an issue of new currency guaranteed by the province. If the bills were to be issued they would contain three words that we know of,—"promise to pay."

Here's a chap who declares that recovery is to be brought about by a decree of fashion. The slim, slender, spirituelle type of girl is going out, says he, and the Mae West type is coming in. Waxing enthusiastic, he declares that bust measurements will increase with the unrecorded years.

Don Ulrich told the story of Newman's great hymn "Lead Kindly Light," during the demonstration. The hymn was then sung as a solo number by Wm. Weale accompanied by Hugh McPherson. Singing of "Stand up for Jesus" by the group and the repeating of the Lord's prayer in unison concluded the demonstration.

CHARLES CLARK, Proprietor

FREE PUBLICITY

One of the thorns in the flesh of the newspaper world is free publicity. The stock of the newspaper publisher is his space, which he must sell in order to pay his way. He is at the mercy of a constant bombardment from various sources, all asking free space for the causes which they wish to promote for their own benefit.

One instance of this may explain the situation. An article arrives from the Dom. Dept. of Agriculture, with information for the farmer on some recent agricultural development. The newspaper man is expected to pay wages to his staff in order to give this information to the public. He is the one unpaid link in the chain that brings the news to its intended destination.

The man who composed the article is a paid servant, and well paid. Moreover the paper on which he writes his article is much too expensive for these times. The government could save a great deal by a humbler and quite as useful quality of paper.

The Dept. of Agriculture maintains a large staff of research workers, whose justification for employment lies in the fact that they promote the efficiency of national agriculture by their discoveries. Their whole labor is for the benefit of agriculture.

Paid employees all down the line until it comes to the point of telling the agricultural public of the work accomplished! This is the most vital point of the service, yet it is the point at which all payment stops. The literature is showered on the weekly newspaper publisher (because the weeklies are most closely in touch with agriculture) in the hope that he is sap enough to hire a staff in order to put over what everyone else is paid for.

To continue this one instance. The Dept. of Agriculture is maintained by taxpayers to give a specific service. It apparently is able to hire field men, service men, office men, research workers, inspectors galore. It can send out endless literature on high-priced paper. But when it comes to reaching the taxpayers, with its information beneficial to the industry, it must depend on the newspaper, which is the vital go-between.

The press is similarly exploited by countless other agencies, private and public. The success of their projects depend upon newspaper publicity, yet they balk at payment. This is perhaps because they think the publisher must fill his pages, and will welcome any material.

The publisher, however, is wakening to a realization that he is the one unpaid element in many a prosperous project. He thinks it is time to take a stand.

A FALSE GOD

Many people in reading of the high legal costs allowed in outstanding court cases, or the fees in the higher realms of other specialized professions, are astounded to think how far these soar beyond all ordinary values. It would appear that a certain brilliancy may be reached while carries a few favored individuals into a rarified stratum where there are no limits to powers of acquisition. While the ordinary members of professional and business circles are as great sufferers from depression as any other classes of citizens, there are isolated "stars" who find opportunity to amass great wealth.

It is one of the features of our individualistic system, that personal initiative is encouraged to the highest possible degree. Achievement is expressed in terms of wealth, which offers the greatest incentive for those of superior ability to translate their achievements into personal profit. Their gifts they regard as a private asset for private benefit. This does not mean that our richest men, or our most acquisitive men are the great men of the country, or are performing the greatest service. In fact the largest incomes are probably amongst men who are merely extracting toll from industry and natural resources.

Surely this is an unhappy and unhealthy condition, brought about by undue emphasis on personal achievement.

Another ideal which might be presented, is that brains and ability are a social rather than a private asset, and should be used for the welfare of society rather than for personal aggrandizement. It is argued that this would destroy initiative and produce a mediocre society.

There are evidences on every side that men engaged in congenial occupations, do not work solely for remuneration, but for love of and pride in their work. In fields of research science and medicine, there are men, utterly indifferent to reward, whose urge for greater knowledge is an impelling force that drives them on. They are not rich men and never will be, but they are the great men, who have their own vision of usefulness, and are careless of outward and visible signs of success. It is probable that even our present high salaried officials, would work quite as hard if their incomes were a dollar a year.

In fact, they would gain a new conception of service to fellowman and become fine unselfish citizens.

It is quite possible that if the maximum income of individuals of this country were set at $25,000, there would be developed in our present richer circles, a very much higher type of citizen. It is certain that their energies and abilities would find an outlet much more beneficial to the welfare of the country, and in the course of a few years our entire conception of success would reach a much higher standard.

HOPE FOR FAIRER DEAL

The relationship between the owners of surface rights and the development of the oil industry is occupying much attention at present. In fact it appears that it has not received any serious regard from the Provincial Government until the present. It will be remembered that three years or more, ago, the Dominion Government was being urged to amend the legislation in order to give surface owners a fairer deal. With the passing of the Natural Resources to the Province, and the lapse in oil development, the vexing conditions of 1930 were somewhat in abeyance for a time. And it is doubtful if the provincial government has been thoroughly informed on this subject. The concerted requests going in from the ranch and farm owners in the path of oil development, have brought to Edmonton a new realization of the situation.

No doubt the law which differentiates surface rights from mineral rights was designed to encourage all types of industry. The owner of surface rights is interested specifically in the value of the surface. It is the rare farmer or rancher who has either the capital or the desire to explore the riches under the surface. If he held both oil and surface rights, he could obstruct very seriously legitimate development, or he could charge prohibitive prices for his land.

Although the regulations as operating at present, work to the grave disadvantage of surface owners, it would be extremely unfair to ignore the value of the oil industry, or what the province and the people owe to those who have promoted this industry. They have ventured, expended huge sums and brought about the tremendous development.

The misunderstandings and inequalities which have come to the fore through this successful development, are after all, quite capable of adjustment.

As one instance of the situation. One piece of property in the oil area, the Oil Company gets $219,000 a year from the wealth underground. The government gets 5 per cent of this—and in 1935 will have power to collect 10 per cent royalty. The surface owner on the other hand, whose surface holds the key to the whole proposition got $250 cash for five acres, and $85.00 a year annual rental. A one per cent royalty on this production, is surely hot an unfair request. And it would seem quite reasonable for the government to pay this royalty, as their share in the returns from production is quite generous, and may be even more so in 1935.

"IFS" IN HISTORY

Some modern historians are fond of speculating on the changes in history if some epochal event had not taken place. What, for instance, would have happened if the British had not lost the United States war of independence; what if Blucher had not arrived in time to end Napoleon's career?

Those are weighty "ifs" of history. But a weightier "if" is raised by Dr. Harry Elmer Barnes' comments on the late Viscount Grey, Britain's foreign minister at the outbreak of the Great War. Dr. Barnes asserts that Viscount Grey's claim that Britain went into war because Belgium's neutrality was violated is now disproved. He says that Britain could have stayed neutral, and then asks what might have happened then.

It is easy to reply that Britain would have saved the lives of a million slain and the injuries of two million maimed. It is easy to say that the national debt would have been a hundred times less than it now is. These calculations are based on the actual outcome of the war. But it is another thing to assume, as Dr. Barnes does, that Britain would have saved the trade she lost and would have known little or nothing about a vast post-war army of unemployed.

If Britain had not gone in the United States would also have remained outside. And Germany would have won. A very different world would now be in existence. A whole book could be written on this mighty "if." Yet it would be a profitless excursion into historical speculation. The moral that stands forth is the old one—that was "disastrous" to victors and vanquished alike. The next one will be disastrous to civilization itself.—Winnipeg Tribune.

THE NEWSPAPER

The following is part of an editorial written for the Calgary Herald anniversary edition by Harold C. King:

All honest men have a friend in the newspaper, and all rascals have an enemy there. It is the clearing house for daily happenings, and the circulatory system of public opinion.

Before the days of newspapers, selfishly ambitious governors were able to tyrannize as they willed, since there was no organ of public opinion to curb them, while wise administrators had no effective means of enlisting the co-operation of the people.

When printing was invented and newspapers began, the dark ages ceased, and as long as the press is free they cannot come again.

Where free expression of opinion in the newspapers is muzzled and news is censored, any kind of evil may be carried on with comparative impunity. Few will know anything about it, and those few will have no effective means of making known their opinion, or registering any protest.

The first act of any tyrant is to muzzle the newspapers. The first duty of every secretary in a politician's office is to scan the newspapers, and clip therefrom the slightest reference to the goings on of Mr. Politician, who carefully trims his political sails to suit the prevailing newspaper breeze.

The man, and still less the woman, has not been born who is impervious to what other people think of them. This is the chink in the central armor of great and small, through which the arrows of public opinion enter. It is why every cult, creed, or party, either try to control a newspaper, or publish one for themselves.

When there was no newspaper freedom anywhere, the public consistently received a raw deal, and it was the public more than the press who found it desperately necessary to fight for the right of the newspaper to free expression of opinion.

Carlyle said: "The press is the fourth estate of the realm," and Napoleon Bonaparte said: "Four hostile newspapers are more to be feared than a thousand bayonets."

Democratic newspapers would be impossible; nobody would know enough of the trend of affairs to cast a sensible vote. The public still have votes in countries where dictatorship now prevails, but the vote is useless to them. The newspapers in such countries are muzzled so that truth about affairs never reaches the voter. Therefore he can never possibly know what he is voting about. Where the press is censored, the destiny of every man is in the hands of some dictator.

In times of rapid change like these, free newspapers are indispensable. They provide for the free ebb and flow of thought, and a continuous current history for the ordinary man.

AGED RESIDENT PASSES IN SLEEP

W. E. Palmer, Aged 91 Years Dies on Wednesday Morning

In the early morning hours of Nov. 22, Wm. Elias Palmer of High River died at his home. He was 91 years of age and in his accustomed health, previous to his quiet passing. Surviving relatives are his wife, two sons, Fred of High River and W. C. of Vulcan, four daughters, Mrs. Bootz of Wolsey, S. Dakota; Mrs. Comp, Mrs. Thornton and Mrs. Bayley all of Spokane. Mr. Palmer was born in Bridgeport, England in 1842, and has resided in this district for about thirty years, prior to that time living for some years in the Vulcan district. He has been a highly respected resident of the district, and his freedom from many of the disabilities of old age, has long been a source of pleasure to friends and family. It will be remembered that last summer the family gathered here in reunion, bringing much happiness to the parents. Mr. and Mrs. Palmer some time ago observed their sixtieth wedding anniversary, and general sympathy is extended to the bereaved widow and the family.

Funeral services will be held on Friday, Nov. 24 at 2:30 p.m. from High River United Church with A. W. Kelly in charge of arrangements.

Looking at the News

Hips and thighs will be worn again, comfortably upholstered. Plump and buxom will be the two words most frequently used to describe the prize beauties of to-morrow. They will be built upon generous plans and specifications. Angularities will yield to curves, the sinuosities of Mae's magnificent contour.

How will that bring about economic recovery, he asks, and he answers it by saying it will start where it ought to start—with the farmer. To achieve fashionable physical proportions the dear girls will sit and drink so much more that a market will be provided which will do away with the necessity for reducing crop acreage. He predicts the day is not far off when the farmer will rise to call Mae West blessed. If she "done any wrong" it was not the farmer, and now her style is going to drive away agrarian distress and discontent. She alone can vamp the fretful west.

(Then the prophet nose-dives from the sublime and tells us that agricultural betterment brought about in this way will be augmented by the repeal of the 18th amendment when free Americans will drink the liquified products of wheat and barley and rye instead of the synthetic stuff they were drinking in Volsteadian days. It is a frightful drop from the ethereal blue to the material drab. It is anti-climax. We liked him better when he was talking of the girls who has started at the right place and in the right way to bring about national recovery.

Company and negotiations are now proceeding for the sale of the New McDougall-Segur, Calmont and Wellington leases in Turner Valley to Royalite Oil Company as subsidiary of the Imperial Oil, so we are informed. While official announcements have not been made, yet officials of none of the companies mentioned will deny the report. Herbert Greenfield, official of Calmont, says: "We have not gone very far in that direction. It would appear as if there is much truth in the reports that Royalite is acquiring as many independent wells as they can get a hold of."

FLABBY BACON IS UNDERFINISHED

A Week or So Extra Feeding Would Produce Firm Bacon in Hogs

The further expansion of our bacon trade with Great Britain depends to a large extent upon quality improvement. Recent advices from the British market criticize our supplies on the score of underfinish in a large percentage of bacon sides, as indicated by softness and flabbiness. This soft flabby bacon is most likely the product of underfinished hogs, of which there are considerable numbers being marketed at yards and plants in Canada at the present time. The remedy lies with the producer in holding back unfinished hogs. In most cases, another week or so on feed would put on the finish so necessary for the making of firm bacon. All hogs of bacon and select weights should be properly finished at their weights. Underfinished is as detrimental as overfinish; and in this case is a very serious obstacle to efforts being made to popularize Canadian bacon with the British consumer. Every hog raiser is asked to co-operate to the best of his ability.—Live Stock Market Report.
